

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In the present invention, a device for inspecting semiconductor devices, which inspects intricate circuit patterns using images formed by the irradiation of white light, a laser light, or an electron beam, is equipped with a function that enables automatic setting of a plurality of parameters in the inspection device by using semiconductor device design data. This helps to improve the operation efficiency of inspection when the conditions required for inspection are set.